

CHRISTINE NAPOLITANO

Partner

Christine Napolitano received her Master of Architecture from the Harvard University Graduate School of Design, where she also earned a Master in Design Studies in Architectural History and Theory. Before joining Behnisch Architekten in 2010, she worked at several practices, including Kyu Sung Woo Architects, where she contributed to the development and realization of the one-million-square-foot Asian Culture Complex in Gwangju, Korea. At Behnisch, she has led project teams through programming, design, interdisciplinary coordination, and construction administration on cultural and campus work, including the Harvard University Science and Engineering Complex. Her experience spans planning and design of cultural and educational spaces, as well as research and teaching facilities. Since becoming a Partner in 2023, Christine has continued to lead projects that prioritize architecture, the public realm, and social and environmental stewardship.
